

TRAVEL ADVISORY:

Per Governor Lamont's recent travel advisory, effective 11:59 p.m. on Wednesday, June 24, 2020, passengers arriving from states with significant community spread of COVID-19 need to self-quarantine for 14 days or the length of their trip.

Quarantine is the best option to prevent spread of disease. However, if a 14-day self-quarantine is not possible, travelers from the impacted states may enter Connecticut if they have had a negative viral test (not an antibody test) for COVID-19 in the 72 hours prior to travel.

This list will be continually updated and published onto the state's website, and you can view it by clicking here.

For answers to frequently asked questions about the travel advisory, please click here.

For more information about the announcement, please read Governor Lamont's press release: click here.